AND TO THE 11TH FROM AMERICA

(A portion of the following European and American Intelligence as publish d in a Second Edition of yesterday's Herald, issued The arrival of the first of the new line of steamers, via Panama, puts us in possession of English letters and papers to the 2nd June, and to the 11th from the United States.

We quote as follows from a special edition of the Panama Mercantile Chronicle of Sunday, BOUTHAMPTON, June 2, 1866.

The Moniteur has at last broken silence and announced that England, France, and Russis, in order to prevent way in Italy and Germany, propose a confecence—the three questions to be discussed are Italy, the Eibe Dushies, and the reform of the Germanic Constitution. Letters of Convocation to the Conference have been sent to Italy, Prussis, Austria, and the Germanic Confederation. The Conference will meet at Paria as seon as possible. The official journal has denounced as false, the report that a secret treaty had been entered into between France, Prussis was to code the Rhenish provinces to France, and Italy the Island of Sardinia. Mr. Layard, who was instructed represent to the French Government the anxiety of England to avert war, has returned to London, and it is reported that Earl Cowley will also return to London, having been summoned home by his Government.

The Queen is now on a visit to the Duehess of Sutherland. Her Majesty will remain at Cleveden is another fortnight, and will not, it is said, visit Balmoral this spring, as had been arranged.

The postponement of her Majesty's visit to Scotand is semi-officially attributed to the somplicated fate of affairs on the Continent, but there is as such reason for supposing it is the critical position of her Majesty's Ministers at home that interrupts he royal progress. Arrangements for the departure of the Court were so far completed that the horses were countermanded after they had reached Aboyne, and some of the servants had already arrived at Salmoral.

Several serious fires have occurred in various parts of the country during the past fortnight—one at Manchester destroyed the goois depot of the principal railway station in that city, and property to the value, it is said, of more than a quarter of a million sterling. Another, at Ottery St. Mary, Devonshire, by which 116 houses were entirely destroyed. The extent of catastrophe is attributable to the violence of the cast wind, the prevalence of thatched roofs and want of water. The configuration was contined almost to the swellings of the poor, and a large number of persons have been deprived of their homes, and lost their clething and furniture.

In reply to Mr. Graves, Mr. Baring has announced that Commodore de Courcy, who was recently sent to Valparaiso, to succeed Commodore Harrey, in the Pacific station, has been superseded at his own recent.

Mr. Disraeli having called attention to the proposed Conference on the Austrain question, asked whether the conditions, which were to form the basis of the Conference, were the adoption of such territorial arrangements, as would offer sompensation to Austria, Prussia, and Italy. The Chancellor of the Exchequer replied that the precise terms of the basis of the contemplated conference had not been finally adjusted—at the same time, he did not think that there was any reason to suppose that a difficulty was likely to arise on the settlement of those terms.

The Customs and Inland Revenue Bill has been

Mr. Layard, in reply to Mr. Griffith, has stated that the Conference of Paris had arrived at the conclusion,

On the motion for going into committee on the Representation of the People Bill, it was agreed that the bill for the redistribution of seats should be incerporated therewith. Sir R. Knightly proposed that the bill for the redistribution of seats should be incerporated therewith. Sir R. Knightly proposed that the question of bribery should be dealt with also by the same committee. The Chancellor of the Exchauer objected to dealing with that question, except with a measure separate and distinct from that of Parliamentary Reform. The Chancellor of the Exchequer, in moving that the Speaker should leave the chair, said that of course Ministers would wait for the preduction of the scheme, which no doubt Sir R. Knightley had framed, although he had not communicated it to the House, for dealing with bribery and corruption. When they had gone through those parts of the bill which were legitimate portloss of it, and they had gone through those parts of the bill which were legitimate portloss of it, and they had gone through those parts of the bill which were legitimate portloss of it, and they had be their duty to give their a dispassionate consideration, and if the hon, gentleman's proposal would be their duty to give their a dispassionate consideration, and if the hon, gentleman's proposal would succeed in dealing with that which was a great evil, the Government would be glad to give him every assistance in their power. But they would not, so far as depended upon them, recode from the dearmination to proceed upon them, recode from the dearmination to proceed by het Majosty's Ministers was neither convenient nor equitable, and that it was wherewise not sufficiently matured to form the basis of a autifactory measure. The hon, member disclained all factious motives, but frankly avowed that he proposed the amendment in direct hostility to the Government. At a late hour the debate was adjourned till the Thursday following, when it was recumed by Mr. Goldsanid, who suggested that boroughs which had a population between 8,000 and 10,000, and now return two members, should hereafter return ona, and that all groupe of boroughs, the combined population of which was above 19,000, ahould return two tembers. He was above 19,000, ahould return two tembers. He was followed by Mr. Goschen on the part of the Government, Sir J. Pakington, Mr. Mill, Mr. Boourfald, Mr. Baxter, Lord F. Cavendish, and other honourable members, when the debate was again adjourned till the following day, when it was again resumed, sgam aujourned until Monday next.

In reply to Mr. Gregory, Mr. Layard states Austria and Russia have issued decrees, by which it is agreed in case of war to confer on the enemy's merchant ships at sea the same immunities as were granted to neutral vessels by the declaration of Paris in 1856. The hon, member also, in answer to Mr. Liddell, confirmed the report that the Chilian minister had presented letters of recall.

On the 30th, Mr. Clay moved the second reading of the Electorate Franchise Bill, the effect of which is to give a vote in cities and boroughs to every min over twenty one years of age in possession of the educational qualities of reading, writing, and arithmetic.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer described the bill as too wide in principle, too narrew in practice, as not being wanted at all, and suggested that it should be read that day six months. An animated discussion ensued, which not being concluded at a quarter to 6, the bill became a dropped order.

ror. ntcreuce on the Danubian Principalities ha The Contreuse on the Danubian Principalities has decided that the assumption of the Hospodariate of the Principalities by Prince Charles of Hohenzollern is illegal. It is said that England and Prance have agreed to decline intervention in the matter—they will, however, await some time before recognising a foreign Prince of Roumania. Prince Charles' recognion at Bucharost has been of the most enthusiastic character, both by the people and the National Assembly. The latter, in order to obey the letter of convention, has passed a resolution decising the father of the Prince to be a naturalised Roumanian, whereby the son of course becomes a native of the country.

The report on the Budget was laid before the Corps Legislatif on the 20th, whereon M. If the American Republics continued the war with Spain she would continue to act with energy against them.

A financial crisis prevails in Catalonia which has quite put an end to all commercial transactions. A complete panic has seized Barcelona. Pailures for numerous sums are announced. GERMANY AND ITALY.

The European crisis still confines its actions to words. Not a shot has been fred, and very likely each Power waits the accidental or impulsive fact which may justify a declaration of war. A congress has been decided upon, and will be held in Paris. At the present moment the date is not fixed. The concentration of the armies, however, still proceeds. Three army corps, amounting to 90,000 men, are said to be posted on the Saxon frontier; 90,000 to 100,000 east Prussians, or Pomeranians, take up the old Southern District of Silesia and Brandenburgh. The Prussian army is said to amount to 500,000 men. Austrian preparations are as energetic as ever. It is computed that she has 200,000 soldiers in Venetia. In Italy, men from all parts of the country are daily earolling themselves in the volunteer corps. The Democratic committee of Milan alone in one day enrolled 3416 men. A Royal decree has been promulgated, according to which, in the event of war, merchant ships belonging to an enemy will not be liable to a capture on the high acas by Prussian war vessels. This measure only to apply in so far as it meets with reciprosity from the enemy. It is thought that the proposal will not be accepted by the Gasz.

The claims of Mrs. Ryves and her son to be the legal descendants of the Duke of Cumberland, a veunger brother of George III., and thereby a memyounger brother of George III., and thereby a member of the Royal Family, came before the Court of probate systerday. The case rests chiefly upon doesmentary evidence, and excites much interest. The pedigree is thus stated—Henry Frederick, Duke of Camberland, married on the 17th of March, 1767, Olive, daughter of Dr. and Sarah Wilmot, and had a daughter, Olive, Princess of Cumberland, who married John Thomas de Serres. From the latter marriage sprung Lavinia Jenetta Horton Serres, who married Thomas Ryves, the issue being a son also named Thomas, who was born in 1833. Mrs. Ryves has already proved her own legitimacy, and her father and mother's marriage. See now seeks to obtain a decree proving the marriage of her grandfather, Henry Frederick, Duke of Cumberland, with Olive Wilmot, her grandmother.

THE FENIANS.

THE FENIANS.

(From the Special Correspondent of the Panama Mercontite Chronicle.)

New York, June 11, 1856.

Tim greatest amount of exciting American intelligence in this despatch will be found to consist of the Fenium movements; everything clao, for the time, being awallowed up in the vortex thereof.

The Fenium movement is a "fizzle," a failure; but they have done something at last, and made war on Great Britain by an INVASION OF CANADA WEST.

INVASION OF CANADA WEST.

The "warlike" General Sweeny, determined upon doing something, gave orders in spite of Stephens' protests and counter-orders, for an invasion of Canada, and during the night of May 31, crossed the Niagara River, landed on British soil and captured Fort Eria. But the high sounding name is only a poor miserable village, sot a defensive post, and the capture was not worth much, except as a foothold. Fiaming despatches were sent abroad, and the New Fork Herald' ame out with a "big kead." The forces were said to number about fifteen hundred mso, and the "army under General O'Neil, was advancing into the interior"—but they did'nt. The U. S. authorities prevented reinforcements and supplies from reaching the invaders, and on the 2nd of June, the Canadian volunteers came upon them at Ridgeway, and a battle, or rather goodly-sized skirmish was the result—several being killed and wounded. The Fenians were reported successful, but strange to say the invaders evasued their captured post, and on the 3rd had taken refuge under the American flag—that is, they (700 mcn and the gallant General O'Neil) were made prisoners under the guns of the U. S. ste-mer Michigan; their companions, either dead or prisoners left in the hands of the "hated Saxon."

ANOTHER MOVEMENT—CANADA RAST. General Sweeny with a number of subordinate generals led another wing—the main one—by way of St. Alban's, Malone, &c., with the intention of invading Canada East; but General Grant, with Generals Meade, Barry, Vodges, &c., started for the seene of action with a large force of regulars. Fenian arms, ammunition, and supplies were seized while en route, and as soldiers are not of much use without such addends, the mevement was stopped in this direction. "If the Government had it said the ar-rms, bad luck to them, its the Faynians that would have shlauter-red the British hon." Oh, that word "if." Reports were telegraphed that Kingston and Montreal were captured; Fenian bonds were at a premium, and excitement ran high, but the next day dispelled the visions of glory.

THE PRESIDENT AROUSED.

On Wednesday last, after having moved quietly for a time, President Johnson issued a proclamation, of which the following is a copy:—

PROCLAMATION BY THE PRESIDENT.

Whereas it has become known to me that certain evil-disposed persons have within the territory and jurisdiction of the United States, begun and set on toot, and have provided and prepared, and are still providing and preparing, means for such a military expedition and enterprise, which expedition and enterprise, which expedition and enterprise is to be sarried on from the territory and jurisdiction of the United States against the colonies, districts, and people of British North Amer.es, within the deminiors of the United States against the colonies, districts, and people and kingdom the United States are at peace; And whereas the proceedings aforead constitute a high misdemeanor, forbidden by the laws of the United States are as well as by the law of nations;

Now therefore, for the purpose of preventing the carrying on of the unitary shad and enterprise aforesaid from the territory and jurisdiction of the United States are as well as the national honour and enforce obedience and respect to the laws of the United States, I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, in and to exhort all judges, marshals, and officers in the service of the United States to employ all their lawful authority and power to prevent and defeat the aforesaid unlawful proceedings, and to arrest and bring to justice all persons who may be engaged therein; and in pursuance of the activation of the Atlantic, to employ the land and naval foress of the United States and the militar thereof to arrest and prevent the setting on foot and carrying on the expedition and empower that state states have a present the setting on foot and carrying on the expedition and naval dence of the United States the ninetieth.

ANDRAW JOHNSON.

By the President:

William H. Seward, Secretary of State.

This disheartened the higher officers; but the leaders away from the seene of action asserted that it was only a blind to cover the eyes of the British Authorities. In spite of it, a political hack, one "General" Jim Kerrigan, began recruiting in the city of New York, and raised a force of 1500 labourers to go to Canada, but the strong hand of the law was raised, and the gallant general disappeared.

THE PROCLAMATION CARRIED OUT.

By virtue of this proclamation General Meade gave orders for the arrest of General Sweeny and some of his subordinate officers, and on June 7th they were prisoners. Sweeny had just ordered an advance, and Canada was to have been taken in spite of British regulars and President's proclamation; but again the Americans interfered.

On the same day, W. R. Roberts, the Fenisa pre-regulars and President's procumation; out again one Americans interfered.

On the same day, W. R. Roberts, the Fenlan president, was arrested for insiting the movement, and is now confined in the U. S. prison is this city—a "martyr to the cause of liberty." He refused to give ball (10,000 dollars) to keep the peace, preferring the notoriety of martyrdom.

ANOTHER MOVEMENT. ANOTHER MOVEMENT.

On the 8th, General Spear led a number of meafrom Vermont, across the burder, captured a few unimportent villages and marched home again, as the provisions and arms, promised, did not reach him. The men had become demoralised, and descried in squads, companies, and regiments, and it was finally resolved to give up the war for the present, as plus-dering had begun (whisky being freely used), women and children were abused and insulted and a general retreating along the whole border naturally ensued. General Spear and staff surrendered to General Meade.

PROSPECTS.

PROSPECTS.

"President "Roberts, in gaol, asserted most boldly to some of his friends, that in spite of Great Britais, the United States, and the whole world, the movement would still prove to be a success. It is true that the Fenian Generals defied General Meade, and threatened to fire upon the United States roops if they interfired with them; but as the latter efficer said he would do the same, and had prevented the nuch needed arms and supplies from reaching the advanced forces, the chapter stepped very contains. America has preserved neutrality and prevented the invasion of friendly territory, and the Fenian movement has turned out a complete failure.

SPECIAL DESPATCH TO THE PANAMA STAR AND HERALD.

New York, June 11, 1866.

The Femian excitement has had its nine daystrun, and run out. The party that crossed from Buffalo to Fert Eric advanced a short distance into Canada, and were met by twice their number of Canadian Volunteers. An engagement ensued, when the Canadians were put to rout in less than twenty minutes, and driven pell mell from the field. The Femians not having artillery, returned to Fert Eric to await reinforcements; but the United States authorities by that time set on foot their forces and prevented the further crossing of reinforcements or munitions of war. Finding themselves exposed to capture by the British, who were gathering in large force about them, the Femians attempted to recross into the United States servitory, but were all captured by the United States servitory, but were all captured by the United States servitory, but were all captured by the United States authorities to arrest all leaders wherever found, and the President issued a preclamation denouncing the movement as a breach of our neutrality laws. The leading Generals and the President of the Brotherhood were arrested, but still large numbers of Femians gathered on the borders at half a dozen different points, determined to fight. A large force gathered at St. Albans, Vermont, and advanced into Canada at that point. Here, too, they had one or two small fights, each time whipping the Canadians. But here, as at Fort Eric, the United States authorities interfered against reinforcements or munitions erossing, and of course the consequence was they were obliged to return. It is said the British pursued the rear guard into our territory, and killed some of them there, for which they will be called to account.

The Vienna journals publish news from Paris stating that during the late financial panie in London, Earl Cosley, by order of his Government, relicited the energetic mediation of the Emperor Napoleon in favour of peace, and received from his Majosty the fullowing reply:

"In the years 1859 and 1854 England opposed my propeals in reference to the settlement of the Venetian and Sci leawig. Holstein questions. Now England wants peace, I also desire peace; but, as the mest favourable opportanities have been frittered away, and as the conflicting interests have been permitted to reach a point at which they must clash, I can no longer assume the responsibility of events."

The Prussians have erected batteries upon the mountains which extend in the direction of Nachod, on the Bohemian frontier.

The Nord Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung of to-day, in an article upon the proposed Conference, says:—

"We do not know what or whom the Plenipotentiary of the Federal Diet is to represent at the approaching Conference, as the most important portion of the Germanic Confederation will be represented by Pruesia and Austria, Although Pruesia, in her rejly to the invitation to the Conference, has not thought fit to bring forward this objection, we are of opinion that this state of things demonstrates the insufficiency of the national representation, and renders more urgent the convocation of a German Parliament."

Earl Clarendon, Prince Gortschakoff, Count Bismark, and General La Marmora have officially amounced that they will shortly arrive in Paris for the opening of the Conference.

Conference.

The reply of Prussia, accepting the invitation to the Conference, was the first to arrive, and this fact is looked upon as a sign of the peaceful intentions of that Power. The Prussian Government declared, in this reply, that it was ready to disarm so soon as the military measures threatening Prussia were discontinued.

Apprehensions are entertained that all the seven Powers which have been invited will not take part in the Conference, as Austria, in accepting the invitation, insists on the condition that the Venetian question shall not be discussed.

The Austrian Cabinet forwarded yesterday identical despetches in reply to the English, French, and Russian invitations to the Conference. Austria accepts the invitation, but only upon certain distinct conditions, which will probably necessitate fresh negotiations.

The Ministers for Foreign Affairs of all the Powers will proceed to Parts to the opening of the Conference. They will act as first, and the respective Ambassadors at the French Court as second Pleujocontiarias. Bean Alienburg will accompany Count Mensdorff to Parts.

Frankfort-on-the-Mains, June 1.

The Conference Committee of the Federal Diot held two sittings yesterday—case in the after-our, and the other in the evening, the latter not transmiting until after 11 e'clock. The election of Her von der Phreiten, as the Federal plein-potentiary, is considered certain.

Frankfort-on-the-Mains, June 1 (evening).

The Federal Diet accepted to-day the invitation to the proposed Conference, with the reaservation that the questions of Schlewig-Holstein and the Federal reforms are matters of an essentially German obsracler so long as they do not affect international relations.

Baron von der Ffordten, the Bavarian Minister of Forsign Affairs, was thereupon ejected to represent the Germanic Confideration.

Barton von oer Proruten, the Bayaran minister et Persign Affairs, was thereupon spected to represent the Germanic Confideration.

The Amstrian representative declared that his Government was ready to disarm as soon as security had been sbeinfed that the preservation of posse should not again be endangured. He further stated that Austria had endosworded in vain to come to an arrangement with Prunsis for the settlement of the Schleswig-Holstein quantion in so-cordance with the rights of the Bund and of the Duchis, and therefore she would now have the matter in the hands of the Conf. deration, and empower the Governor of Holstein o convoke the estates of that Duchy. The Prunsian representative made a similar declaration as regards disarcament; and announced that if the Diet should be unscensuli in inducing Austria and Baxony to disarm, or head reject the Prunsian proposals for Potent reform, Prusia would conclude that the Diet is not equal to its mission. The Prunsian prepresentative stated, in conclusion, that Prunsia had never intended to decided the question of the Elbe Duchic by an appeal to arms.

The declaration of the Austrian representative relative to the question of the Duchise was referred to the Schleswig-Holstein Committee, and considered as the introduction to a political execution against Prussia.

The Bayarian representative brought forward a motion that, in view of the present armanents of several mombers of the Canfideration, it would be advisable, in order to avoid a conflict, that Prunsis and Austria he invited to whithers whele troops from Rastadt, Mentz, and Frankist, or at all events, that all Federal Intrenses be declared neutral territory.

The Empress's ball last Monday night was not so good as the others, shiply because there were six hundred people instead of three hundred, and the rooms were rather crowded. The season of 1866 is nearly over; but if there be war, Paris will continue very full. Parliament, too, has done so little that its duration must be prolonged.

Ova special correspondent, writing on the 11th of June, from New York, says:—

The Congressional news is not of very great importance; the principal part of the daily sessions being occupied in the discussion of the report of the "Committee of Fifteen" on reconstruction. This measure may be said to occupy the attention of both the Houses. A bill has certainly been introduced for the sade keeping of moneys in the hands of disloursing officers. A resolution declaring that the United States cannot guarantee the bonds of Maxico without injuring its foreign credit was referred to the Committee on Fereign Affairs. An attempt was made to recognise the Fenians as belligerents, but failed. The amendment to the Reconstruction Bill disfranchies all the rebet officials and makes every man, born or naturalised in the United States, a citizen, and entitled to a vote, if not excluded by crime, a certain professed to the committee of The constitution referred to the committee of the constitution of the committee of the committee of the constitution of the committee of the comm

The war waged by the allies against the indominable republic of Paragnay still drags its alow length along. Nearly the whole of the allied army is now in Paragnayan territory. But this must not be taken as an indication that the struggle is dying out, for the dictator Lopez is firmly encamped in a portion of the interior of the country, that is inaccessible to any approach by an houtile army, and is there biding his time to strike an advantageous blow against the enemy.

there stong me time to be the dearn, the two Peruvian against the enemy.

By the Argentine papers we learn, the two Peruvian irch-clads, Huascar and Independencia, had captured two Spanish merchant vessels, richly laden, one of which was burnt, and the other kept.

BOLIVIA.

BOLIVIA.

It is pleasant to note that the source of endless differences between Chile and Bolivia is at last settled amicably, and it is to be hoped permanently.

CHILB.

On the 28th of last mouth the Government issued a decree expelling from the Chilian territory all Spanish residents. Those who should obtain naturalisation as Chilian citizens within the time given of thirty days are alone excepted from the operation of this law.

The war absorbs almost entirely the attention of the country.

The war absorbs almost entirely like attention of the country.

In the eight months we have been carrying on war financial resources have only been sought in the donations of patrictic individuals, in the loan without interest of the public employés, and in the redemption of annuities.

The national bank has offered to lend the Government a sum of six millions of dollars, and it appears the loan will be accepted.

Yesterday, June 1st, Congress opened its sessions. The President of the Republic pronounced the customary messegs, in which he gave a statement of the position of the country.

ber for Celne should the Government be defeated in the House of Commons.

The Tilegraph is very angry with the shameless politicians that are endeavouring to overthrow the virtuous schemes of a virtuous Ministry, though, at the same time, at the Tilegraph is very singry, though, at the same time, at the Tilegraph is very singry, though, at the same time, at the Tilegraph asserts that in any case the Gevernment will come out of the conflict in triumph. If the debate should result in a majority for the Government, the Tories will have shot their last boil. They may still nibble at details and concoct fresh amendments for the chance of delay, but they will have practically tested the House to exhaustion, and the dreaded must be suffered to the House to exhaustion, and the dreaded must end of the House to exhaustion, and the Government will enjoy the singular triumph of having compelled an utterly autrestworthy Chamber to act as if it possessed public spirit and political honour. If, on the other hand, the Government be defeated by the shameful conditions of the day, it will strike a mortal blow at its enemies by bringing the contest to a prompt and decisive issue.

The Advertiser believes that the best course for Mr. Gladstone to take is to postpone the Reform Bill, not for a year, but for some three or four months; saking the House of Commons to meet, especially for the purposes of that bill, early in November, and to continue sitting on the last day of January, then to put the hast touches to its work, and to send the whole measures to the Upper House before Easter. Captain Hayter does not say, nor does he mean, that he opposes the Reform Bill in substance and in spirit. So far is he from doing this, that he voted with the Government against Earl Grosvenor's amendment. All that he says is, that he does not like the details of the Distribution of Seats Bill. Well, who does like that bill?

ELECTORAL BRIBERY.

The national bank has offered to lend the Government a sum of six millions of dollars, and it appears the loan will be accepted.

Yesterday, June 1st, Congress opened its essaions. The President of the Republic pronounced the customary message, in which he gave a statement of the position of the country.

The most remarkable part of this message is the declaration that the Government is determined to prosecute the war with energy. For this object he commanded the cooperation of Congress, so as to furnish the country with a guadron which, united to that of our allies all give Calle the same of carrying on successful operations.

On the 22nd ultimo, the Peruvian corvette Union hoisted the flag of Admiral Manuel Blanco, who took his departure the same day to assume the command of the allied Republics to estatlish a telegraphic line through Ecuador, Petu, Bolivia, and Chile. A commissioner from Peru is to start by his mail to Europe for this purposs. Such a neasure will undoubtedly be of great transcendence, and it is expected it will soon be realised. The Peruvian steamer Chalaco has captured a vessel loaded with provisions for the Spanish fleet, commanded by an officer of the Spanish freet, commanded by an officer of the Spanish novy.

The sum of 360,000 dollars his been ordered to be coined in five cent pieces. The amount of Bolivian onto move in circulation is very small, and will in a short time entirely disappeer.

"On Monday," says the Wanganui and Taranaki. "On Monday," says the Wanganui and Taranaki. "Hon Monday," says the Wanganui and Taranaki. "Hon Monday," says the Wanganui and Taranaki. "These are the first levy of Major M'Donnell's continguit, with which he proposes to harses the disaffected natives still proviling between Pates and New Plymouth. A portion of the men left Wanganui by the p. s. Start, yesterday ovening, under command of the Major, socompanied by his brother, Captain M'Donnell, and Lieutenant Gudgeen. It is intended to join with these the military settlers now at the Pates, making a force of about 300 strong."

From Poverty Bay we learn that some of the natives are again talking of driving the Pakohas into the see, but this doesn't mean much. Drunkmunes is rapidly spreading amongst the Maories in that district, and rum may prove a nore certain externization than the rifle.

Agreece of Native affairs, it is important to note that William Thompson, the kingmaker, arrived here on Sunday from the Thanes, in H.M.S. Esk, to pay his promised visit to Sir George Grey. "This chief," says the Southern Oreas, "expects the Waikato lands to be restored to him. What the Governor wants renains to be seen. This certainly is an event of some importance, as bearing on the relations between the Natives and Europeans."

Ensinese continues in a sound state, though a number of small traders have lately ligured in the Bankruptoy Court. The present insolvency law affords the utmost facilities to dishonesty, and Wellington within the last year has had her share of people who make a trade of failure.

To the Editor of the Herald.

Sin,—The letter of Mr. Henry Kendali, in your issue of this morning, having reference to a criticism published in Bell's Life of Saturday last, on certain poems, has resulted in an interview with your correspondent. Will you kindly afford me space to express my regret, and at the same time my satisfaction at finding that I arrived at too heaty a conclusion in inferring plagiarism against my friend. The evidence, however, did appear to me at the time to be conclusive; but I have much pleasure in now stating my entire belief in Mr. Kendal'le claim to the authership of both poems.

The Sydney Morning Merald.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 2, 1866.

In the Legislative Council, yesterday, the President took the chair at half-past 4 o clock. St. John's Personage Bill was read a third time and passed.

On the Order of the Day for the second reading of the Advances to Agents Bill, Mr. Towns asked for a postponement to enable him to obtain the opinion of the Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. A. Camperil declined to do so. The bill had been already before the Chamber, and as he understood the Government were going to oppose the bill, he should press it on in order to find out their grounds of opposition. The bill had acted well in England during twenty-four years, and would do the same here if adopted. He moved the second reading of the bill.

After some remarks by SH W. MANNING and AU-GORDON,
The POSTMANTER-GENERAL stated that he should oppose the bill on the part of the Government. First, because it was inapplicable to the colony; next, because it would affect principals resident in the ecdony; and, lastly, because it had not received proper consideration.

Mr. A. CAMPINIL agreed to the postponement, and the order of the day was thereupon adjourned until quiring a seconder.

Mr. B. Deas Thomson said that, under one of the Standing Orders of 1856, such a motion as that before the House required a seconder.

The Pristners said that the rule quoted appeared rather vague, and that according to Parliamentary tractice, such a motion did not require a seconder. After some discussion, the question was referred to

After some discussion, the question was referred to the Standing Orders Committee.

Sir W. Manning, to avoid difficulty, seconded the notion for the second reading, and explained the provisions of the bill, of which, with some little qualification, he approved, explaining that the object was to induce those with capital to help into business those who had none; to enable a servant to be paid according to the success of his employer in business, and to enable those who wished to retire, or the relicts of partners to retain a share in profits without being regarded in law as partners. He stated his belief that the Limited Liabilities Act in England had nothing to do with recent failures there.

Act in Engine in an industry there.

On the Order of the Day for the second reading of the Partnership Bill, the debate was adjourned, after some brief discussion, to that day formight, for similar reasons as these employed in regard to the Advances to Agents Bill.

The House adjourned at 6 o'clock to that day week.

Is the Legislative Assembly, yesterday, there being only nineteen members present at half-past three o'clock, the Sprakna declared the House adjourned until to-morrow (Thursday).

The supplement containing the news by way of America gives nothing from Europe but what is already known, modified by more recent intelligence. Dates are to the 2nd June via Panama, while the telegraphic news by way of India is to the 12th June. The report, however, in reference to the Fehian movemen confirms the brief account contained in our issue of the 27th ultimo.

America could not continue without leading to collision either with the authorities of the United States or with the Canadian Government, Detached from all bombastic Government. Detached from all bombastic language, the facts seem to be these:—
The territory of Canada was invaded by a body of armed insurgents who were encountered by a few loyal troops. The victorious Fenians "evacuated their post," and endeavoured to return to the country from which they had set that it is not a second to extend the second to the return to the country from which they had set out, in order to escape the fate which assuredly awaits their leaders whenever they come within the power of Great Britain. It is all very fine for men to talk about their rights, but other people have rights too, and among these the most obvious is that of a Government to preserve its own existence, and to crush all those by whom that existence is deliberately attacked. In view of this possibility these valiant invaders retreated, and they have partly fallen into the hands of the American Government, who thought hands of the American Government, who thought it was worth while to maintain something like a reputation for fidelity to national engagements, reputation for idelity to national engagements, and came at length to believe that the spectacle of a regular organisation openly contemplating conquest, raising armies and men, incorporating them in regiments, and placing them under generals, was quite as much as it would be expedient to allow in the face of the civilised world.

No delusion is too great for the Fenians, and no falsehood is too figitious for their American abettors; but when people tell us that they conquered and ran away—that they invaded a country and evacuated it—that they found safety not in victory but in flight—we have a right to conclude that whatever may have been the accidents of single combat they have been practically beaten. The old story tells us that a soldier called to his commanding officer that he had caught a Tartar. "Bring him in,"
was the instruction. "But he won't come!"
"Then come without him." "But he won't let me!" Such is the kind of victory which has been trumpeted by these madmen. Never has been trumpeted by these madmen. Never since regular Governments existed upon the face of the earth has such a spectacle been seen. A people enjoying the hospitality of a State in friendly relation with another Government, themselves professing to be citizens of that State, yet forming a great national association so-called for the purpose of overthrowing that friendly Government, seems indeed a march beyond the old style of sedition and rebellion. But when we consider that the Power against which they have waged war is Power against which they have waged war is recognised by the whole world as the greatest among maritime nations, with boundless resources to support that maritime superiority, and that the people who are aiming at the subjugation of this Government are the kindred of Irishmen who under its protection enjoy not only life, property, and liberty, but to the highest possible degree share all the advantages of office, the thing spears still more marvellous. What, however, strikes the world with still more astonishment is that these very people are attacking a peaceable colony composed largely of their own countrymen hostile to their designs, and that this colony is thousands of miles distant from the country they pretend to deliver. There is no doubt that the advice of some great French politicians ought to be well con-sidered by the British Government. People who act so are madmen. They are not to be regarded as sane in their moral and mental constitution. They are simply wild animals, capable, perhaps, of being tamed by time; but at present not fit for the full enjoyment of liberty. The consideration of this moral and intellectual hallucination ought to soften the anger of the Power they have provoked, and mitigate the severity of its visitation on those who may fall into its hands.

The Government of the United States has acted properly, although the interposition has been delayed too long. It admits, in the proclamation of the President, that it has tolerated clamation of the President, that it has tolerated proceedings which are a high misdemeanour forbidden by the laws of the United States as well as by the law of nations. It was its own business, however, and England was not likely to invoke its aid against its will, or stoop to complaints which, if not enforced by the conscience of the American people, it would be unavailing to present excepting under the threat of war. But, in fact, the Penians are not worth the pewder and shot which such a conflict would demand to the people among whom they have demand to the people among whom they have found shelter, and whose national reputation they have so compromised and endangered. We hope that this is the end of the affair. There can be no doubt now

Mr. Towns moved the adjournment of the debate to that day week.

Mr. E. D. Thomson suggested that the adjournment should be for a fortnight to allow of the House being guided by the news received by the mail.

After scine remarks by Sir W. Manning and Mr. A. Campari, and the colory; and, lastly, because it was inapplicable to the colony; next, because it would affect principals resident in the colony; and, lastly, because it had not received proper consideration.

Mr. A. Campari, then moved the second reading Mr. A. Campari, the moved the second reading Mr. A. Campari, the moved the second reading Mr. A. Campari, the moved the second reading the peace of pir on a small scale, indicate the style of warfare they have thought proper to assume. As to their refraining from injury and vi lence to the peaceable inhabitants, such a thing may be possible where there is a strong Government behind, but not where the only governing authority is itself involved in the perils of crime, and is every instant in danger of retreating to a garret. The fact is, these proceedings are inconsistent with the age, and with the general intelligence of mankind. The rising of a nation against a power within it, may be justified by result, but the conspiracy of men who did not expose themselves to any other peril that may arise from contact with the Government under whose wing they live, and who by their proceedings involve they live, and who by their proceedings involve others in misery and ruin, deserves only to be described as what it is—a mean and dastardly described as what it is—a fixed and distantly attempt to wring money from ignorance and credulity, with a consciousness that all these schemes must end, to those who believe in them, n confusion and overthrow.

The notion of the Fenians, no doubt, throughout has been that the American people would take up their cause and make war upon England for the possession of Canada—as if this would for the possession of Canada—as if this would have any effect upon the fate of Ireland. Canada might fall, and would naturally fall under the power of the United States, if its Government chose to put forth all its strength; but it would require that strength to be put forth, and the resistance it would incur might leave no great cain. But what would incur might forth, and the resistance it would incur might leave no great gain. But what would this do for Ireland? How would it open the shores of that country to the Fenian armies? It is, of course, impossible to foresee what might be the issue. Greater maritime Powers compared with Great Britain have threatened her security more than once in history, but there is no record of their having done so with success, or carrying into their ports. so with success, or carrying into their ports any spoils worthy of their sacrifices. England may, however, well be indignant at the folly and ferocity of the movement. All that it is in the power of the Government to do, it is, and has been for a long time disposed to do, to make Ireland as prosperous as any part of the United Kingdom. These wild outbursts of aboriginal hate are so many obstructions to the peaceful solution of questions too difficult the peacetal solution of questions too difficult to be resolved in a day, and prevent the influx of that enterprise and capital which, but for the turbulence of her false friends, would soon make Ireland the home of a prosperous nation.

THE arrival of the first mail steamer from Panama completes the chain of steam com-munication round the world, and presents the new service which has filled in the missing link as an accomplished fact in the eyes of the world. That which has been for so many years a subject for discussion and anticipation is now a reality. In a few months it will not only be a fact, but a familiar fact. The novelty will a lact, but a familiar fact. The novelty will have worn off, and all arrangements will have become adjusted to the improved condition of communication; and when we have had time to get used to it, a sudden withdrawal of the accommodation would be found very inconvenient, and give rise to great complaints. An Australian may now go round the world com-Australian may now go round the world com-fortably in four months, and during his trip will see Europe, Asia, Africa, and America, and have time enough in Europe to transact a little business.

The voyage of the Rakaia has proved her to be a thoroughly efficient vessel, and well adapted for the service to which she is assigned. The company has certainly hitherto done justice to its contract by providing vessels as efficient as it is possible to construct them in the present state of mechanical science, and has earned its subsidy fairly. There has been nothing to complain of either as to the promptitude or the character of the preparations, and the capabilities of the new route are receiving a the capabilities of the new route are receiving a fair trial. It is satisfactory that thus far the efforts of the company have not been marred by any of those misadventures which will sometimes spoil the best-laid plans.

On her passage eutwards from England, the Rskaia fully proved her competency as a packet boat. The journey from Milford Haven to Panama by way of Cape Horn is estimated at 11,315 miles, and was performed in forty-six days and a half, with two stoppages for coal, involving a detention of seven days and a half, and with a delay of three days in the Straits of Magellan, owing to heavy weather. She steamed the whole journey, and went at an average speed of ten and one-third knots an hour, which is a very good pace to keep up for a long voyage. She arrived at Panama six days before the time fixed for her departure, and so kept her first appointment punctually; but there was of course no time for docking and cleaning. She left Panama at the appointed date—the 24th of June, and arrived at Wellington on the 22nd of July, one day after her proper time. Retween Wellington after her proper time. Between Wellington and Sydney there has been a little more than the fixed time consumed, so that she did not make her appearance in our port quite to date. The important part of the to date. The important part of the journey, however, was the run between Panama and Wellington. This is the longest run on any mail route in the world. It has been a matter of considerable speculation at has been a matter of considerable speculation amongst nautical men as to the possibility of its being performed with the punctuality necessary for a mail service, unless a coaling station is established at some island in the South Seas. established at some island in the South Seas. We cannot of course draw general conclusions from a single instance, nor can we tell as yet whether the other vessels will perform the feat as satisfactorily as the Rakaia has done, But it is certainly very encouraging that the first voyage has been so successful. We were prepared to make considerable allowances. The route is not one that has been traversed by steam vessels, and indeed very little traversed at all; for though sailing vessels frequently make voyages between New Zealand and Valparaiso or Callao, it is very seldom that a ship clears out for Panama. Something, therefore, has to be discovered as to courses, currents, and winds, and the detailed local experience that is so abundant on other frequented routes and winds, and the detailed local experience that is so abundant on other frequented routes has to be gathered up, tabulated, compared, and made systematically available. All this will come in due time. Some savings of time will be thereby effected, and little delays will be avoided, which will make the arrivals at the different ports quite as reliable as to date as other mail services are. The pioneer voyage has been by no means exceptionally favourable. On the contrary, between Pitcairn's Island and New Zealand three separate gales of wind were encountered, and there was a full average of the stormy weather to be expected. In the summer months the passage will probably be a quieter one.

The passenger traffic by this route has hitherto been quite as large as could have been expected until the reliableness of the transit had been thoroughly developed. We have no doubt that it will increase every month, and will prove a sensible addition to the convenisettled, and order is established in that country, a line of telegraph will no doubt speedily be completed throughout it from north to south, and on through the Republics of Central America to Panama. In that case later intelligence will be obtainable than is now possible by this route, although not later than is obtainable by the other.

The Panama route is likely to prove ser-The Panama route is likely to prove serviceable to the mercantile community in respect of light freight, although it would be desirable that the number of transhipments should be reduced. All packages have to be shifted from one vessel to another at St. Thomas's, then to one vessel to another at St. Thomas's, then to the railway at Aspinwall, then to a small steamer at Panama, to be again transferred to the large steamer, which loads up twelve miles off the shore. It is no worse than by the other route, but it would be an advantage to diminish the number of transhipments as much as possible, as it saves time, and lessens the risk of damage to goods.

In another column will be found an interest-In another column will be found an interest-ing account of the voyage from the pen of a passenger who has come right through from Southampton—a passenger, by the way, whose destination is Melbourne, though our Victorian friends will insist upon it that the Panama route is perfectly useless to them in all respects. The description is quite tempting to those who are fond of travel. There are no terrors in the Lathmus, and the accommediation in the best Isthmus, and the accommodation in the boats on both sides of the isthmus appears to be all that can be desired. The principal inconve-nience complained of is the extreme lightness of the vessel on nearing New Zealand in con complaint for which there is an easy remedy.

PHILOSOPHICAL SOCIETY OF NEW SOUTH WALES.—The usual formightly meeting of this society was hold last night, in the hall of the Australian Library, Bombstreet, The chair was occupied by Professor Smith, of the Sydney University. The Rev. Dr. Bleasdale and Mr. Knight, Commissioners of the Victorian Enthibition, were present. Dr. Bleasdale exhibited an interesting collection of mineral specimens. Papers were read by Mr. G. R. Smalley; he Curstor of the Museum. Mr. Smalley's paper was on the magnetical survey of the colony, which he is now making; his remarks, chiefly preliminary, being ilinstrated by apparatus and diagrams. The subject of Mr. Krefft; paper was, "The dentition of Thylacole's carnibes," and his observations were likewise made with reference to models and specimens had on the table. Voice of thanh were passed to both gentlemen for their valuable and interesting contributions. Some conversation the followed on the subject of a Scientific Cangress. The Rev. Dr. Bleasdale said that the matter had been considerably discussed in Melbourne in connection with the Victorian Exhibition. The idea, as he gathered it from the newspapers, was that men of scientific attainments and practical experience should meet together and talk over the manufactures exhibited, and confer with each other of science as applied to art in any of the forms. Papers should also be read, and the discussions et them might take place at stated times, while the Exhibition had brought together the materials, and when discussions had taken places, tested the second places of the second places of the state of the investigation and the output together the materials, and when discussion had taken place at stated times, while the Exhibition had brought together the materials, and when discussions at them, and the second places are sufficient to the in the British Association at home. After come other observations of similar purport, the matter was allowed to drop. On the motion of Mr. G. R. Smalley, a vote of thanks was given to the Bev. FATAL ACCIDENT FROM FIRE.—Mrs. 8. Pricettly, jun., residing in Albion-street, Surry Hills, was yesterday morning burned so severely, that she expired at 12 o'clock last night. It appears that the unfortunate young lady was leaning over the fire when the sleeve of her dress ignited, and spread rapidly. Mr. Pricettly, we are informed, was at the time in bed, suffering from illness, but on hearing the screems of his wife he rushed down stairs and threw a poncho over her. Some persons at work close by also heard Mrs. Pricetty screem, and wont to her assistance. She was so fearfully burned about the upper part of the body that, notwithstanding medical sid was immediately obtained, and every effort mede to alleviate her agony, she expired at the hour above stated.

HERE SIPP'S CONCERT.—There was a crowded assemblage of the Sydney clitte last night at the Masonic Hall, where Herr Sipp's long promised executed to vocal and instrumental music was given. The Governor was not present, though the entertainment was announced as being under vice regol patronage. The performance was, on the whole, very successful, though it was spun out to a somewhat greater length than was altogether agreeable. As far as intrinsic merit goes, the items of the programme were all that could be desired, and were executed in admirable style. But as a rule, music, of what Herr Sipp calls the "classical modern school," is but "caviare" to the general public. There are not many persons whose musical tasto is so refined that they can thoroughly appreciate that severely "classic" style of art, in which Herr Sipp seems to sweel. Every one must acknowledge that Herr Sipp is a talented musician, and that considered as specimens of manual, or rather digital, doxterity, his performances on the planoforte were splendid, but not altogether pleasing, and consequently the audience, towards the latter portion of last night's entertainment, began to get rather tired of the continual succession of difficult fantasias, which, though very brilliant compositions, were not suited to eatch the popular ear. The entertainment opened with a quartotic for two violina, viole, and violoncello, and was admirably executed by the Mesers. Deane. Mrs. Cordere gained great applause by her tasteful rendering of the pretty ballad entitled "When we are parted." A planoteric sole, by Herr Sipp, received as encore, which was quickly responded to. The fine chorms, "Lob des Kriegerstandes," was sung in assoliant style by the German Concordia Society, and was rapturously encore. Mrs. Of "Calescon gave "When the moon is brightly beaming in a very sp tion. In an interlade between these two pieces Har Sipp will perform on the piane, and the members of St. Mary's Literary Institute will sing some choice glees and solve.

Wesleyan Church Sistentation and Extension Society was last evening held in Bourke-street Church, the Rov. W. Curnow presiding. The objects of this society—"the stimulation and combination of the efforts of the Wesleyan Church in New South Wales to establish and extend the ordinances of God." in the country—and its claim upon the sympathy and support of the Wesleyan Church and the general public, were ably stated and advocated by the several speakers. The income of the society for the past year amounted to £2901, of which the sum of £70 3s. 6d. was contributed in this Circuit. The meeting was well attended, and the audience appeared to be deeply interested in the object which brought them together. The meeting was closed by a dozology and the apostolic benediction. We should not omit to mention that the cheir, under the direction of Mr. Hadfield (Miss Raticelge presiding at the harmonium), performed everal beautiful pieces of sacred music, for which a vote of thanks was carried by acclamation.

The Illucturar Express of 30th ultimo remarks:—For the district generally, the advancement of the interests of all the lukewarmness in reference to the proposed Intercolonial Melbourne Exhibition will have a very disparaging effect. Living in one of the finest districts in the colony, abounding in minerals of all kinds, the very material which, amongst men meeting at this commercial mart, will command the most attention, it seems almost makes to permit such an opportunity of making known the vast ressurces of Illawarrs will pass unrepresented at Melbourne. We should sincerely hope not. We trust that under any circumstances, gentlemen will be ready in our district to individually forward exhibits such as will astonish many, if not all, the residents of the slater colony, and be the mean in some trilling measure of upholding what has been known in some t

The fire bell was sounded, and the members of the Brigade quickly mustered in force and hastened to the scene of configuration. The fire, however, that statued too great strength for any efforts to be of service in saving the place. The flames were first observed at half-past 12 o'clock, and at 3 little was left of the main building but the bare walls, and the work of devastation was still going on. There were unusistakable wridenous that the fire was the work of an incendiary. The back door of the main building had been burst open and combustible material built up under the staircase, which was the means of destroying the whole fabrio. There were also two places in the back premises where fire had been made—one of which was put out before any damage was done, and the other (in the stable) not until parts of the foor and roof had been consumed. The hotel was the property of Mr. William James, but was mortgaged to Sir Chazles Nicholson for £5000.

Shriphid POUND DEAD IN THE BUSH.—On Tuesday

set, the body of an unfortunate German shepherd, named John Maro, was found dead in the bush at Sandy Creek under very painful circumstances. Late on the precoding evening the sheep which the deceased had in charge were found to be missing. Early on Tusasky morning Mr. Pearson proceeded to his hut, and finding he had not returned, an immediate search in the bush was isastituted, and in the course of the morning the whole flock was found uniqued but no shepherd was with them. The search was continued for the missing man, and in the afternoon Mr. Pearson was attracted by the dog of the deceased running towards him, and by fellowing up the direction from whence he came, he found the body of the unfortunate man lying quite dead upon the side of a hill. Mr. Pearson covered the corpse over with bunkes, to keep the birds away, and then came into town to give information to the police. On Wednesday morning a magisterial inquiry was held before Mr. H. Baylis, P. Mr., when Mr. Pearson repeated in evidence the facts that we have just stated, and added that the deceased had told him seme time previously that he had a wife and two children residing at Antimony, Mr. Ivor diggings, Victoria. Allem Bradley Morgan was also examined, and deposed that he was a duity qualified medical practitioner, and had examined the body of the deceased. There were no marks of violence on it: he had also made a post morten cramination of the body; the stomach contained some foot, but it was not infamed, and he saw nothing unusual about it. The brain, lungs, and liver appeared healily. The heart was slightly embarged, and loaded with fat, and he believed the man died from natural causes, probably from fatty disease of the heart.—Wagge Wagya Express, July 28.

The Lady Don, schooner, ran into the pilot boat Proserpine, outside the Heads, this morning; the Proserpine was disabled, and has come in for survey. The Ricerine Herals states that prior to M'Intyre's death he had gained information as to where a tribe of natives having with them white children were to be looked for. He got a boy from a party of natives, who is being taken care of and instructed, with the view of gaining information regarding the tribes of the interior. The friends of deceased say if he had lived three weeks longer he would have reached the natives with white children and ascertained everything that can be traced of Leichhardt.

or another case or a man whose whole and children were in queenaland; and he considered it would be unjust to relieve one and not the other. He thought it was quite contrary to the spirit of resolutions passed at previous meetings to grant relief to persons who were bodily injured; a separate fund should be established for such cases.

Mr. ALEXANDER CAMPRELL rose in support of the resolution. He considered a mistake had been made in reference to the appropriation of some of the money collected; if the resolutions which were passed at the public meeting were read together, he thought it would be seen that the relief of widows and orphans only was contemplated.

Mr. C'Down considered the case of the sallor who had been relieved was a very deserving one, or relief would not have been given.

Mr. E. T. Fenfold thought there would be cases in which mothers who had been dependent on their some would come under their notice, and it would be very hard to pass a resolution of such a nature as would preclude relief being given to them.

Mr. SUTHELIAND thought if the Secretary were to read the resolution passed at the last committee meeting, the matter would be explained.

The SECRITARY stated that the first resolution passed was to the effect that the applications received should be put seriation in committee; and the next resolution stated the amount to be paid to the widows and orphans.

Mr. SUTHELIAND saked if it was not decided that each case should be taken on its merita, as it came before the committee? The resolution was simply uge trid of the question whether relief should be afferded to persons out of the colony; it was distinctly understood then that each individual case should be read up and considered, and it was for the committee of the committee to decide whether they should give relief to widows in Queensland, England, or anywhere else. There had been no case, he thought, yet decided upon, but only tumpersord then that seach individual case should be specially understood then that each individual case shou

Mr. JOHN FAIRFAX suggested that the five last words of the motion be omitted.

The majority of the committee concurring in Mr. Fairfax's suggestion, Mr. Gonanx amended the resolution as follows:—"That the funds collected on behalf of the sufferer by the late wrecks be appropriated to the relief of widows and orphans only of those who were drowned."

The motion having been put by the Chairman, was carried almost unanimously.

One gentleman asked what would be done in Smith's case?

Mr. JOHN FAIRFAX said that a subscription for Smith had been commenced at the Hereld office; a list was lying on the Hereld office counter, and he had no doubt it would be well responded to.

Mr. RICHARD JONES moved, and Captain Fox seconded, the following:—"That a sub-committee be appointed to consider applications, and report upon the same to the full committee; such committee to consist of the following gentlemer: Alderman Raphael, Mr. J. The Secretary (Mr. W. M. Young) having read the notice convening the meeting, the report was taken as read.

Further banking and commercial firms having suppneds since the outgoing Marsellier mail, the markets for produce have continued in a very unsettled state, and the business done has been only for actual wants, the greater part of the importars refraining from offering goods at present. Some extensive arrivals of gold having taken place from America during the last two or three days have given a firmer tone to business, and we slow with rather a more cheerful tone.

A letter, under date London, 1st June, to a mercantile house in this city, from a large wool importer, mentions that "very little difference is perceptible from day to day in our wool salss. The price obtained is singularly good in the face of such a panic as we have had to pass through, just indicating how safe our calculations would have been had all gone on smoothly in the financial world."

One of our London City correspondents writes on the 1st of June:—"Commercial depression still prevails, several failures having occurred this week, commencing with the Consolidated Bank (limited), whose directors were in anxious deliberation the whole of Sunday last, and actually dated their letter to the papers on Sunday evening announcing the stoppage of the bank, considered by most persons as suicidal. It would appear that the directors, who themselves have nearly two millions sterling in the bank on deposit account, and hold 3500 shares, became needlessly frightened. It was very fortunate that Mr. Richardson happened to be here at this juncture, and was enabled so promptly to transfer the Australian Joint Stock Bank's agency to the National Provincial Bank of England, who pay all outstanding drafts of the Australian Joint Stock Bank, which, Mr. Richardson assures me, is not compromised by the stoppage of the Consolidated Bank. James Baines and Co., of London, connected with the Black Ball Line, have failed, but continue their shipping business under new firms, but composed of the same individuals. Enthoven and Sons, a large house in the metal trade, have also suspended payment, with liabilities of some £300,000. Several other failures are occurring, but in many cases the names are not made public, as they manage to arrange privately with their creditors. In mylast letter I enclosed you an able printed protest under the head 'Panic,' taking exception to the gloomy report of the money articles in the Times as of a mischievous tendency, and not calcu

The passage from Southampton to St. Thomas's, a small Danish island in the West Indies, was made in the Atrato, a magnificent steam-frighte of 1987 tonaregister, 3126 tone burthen. She is driven by paddle-wheel engines of 800 nominal horse-power, working up to 2400. The Atrato is the largest steamen I have ever voyaged in, and will not suffer in comparison with any other, whether of the P. and O. or Cunard, either as to cleanliness, comfort, speed, exquiet. Space and fitness are her characteristics in every part. Like most others belonging to the R. M. S. P. Company, whe has a flush or spar deck, which gives fine promensede for passengers, and affords most acceptable abelter in bad weather.

In walking over the ship, the first thing the visitor notices, after curiosity about the ship itself has been satisfied, is the fact that all the rules and regulations—all the instructions and advice to passengers—are Trilingual—at once suggesting that he has embarked with strangers and foreigners, and although going to a British colony in a British ship, he will see and hear much that is not English; and his first walk on deck, his first meal in the saloon, will satisfy him that he is with people of strange speech and dissers tongues, and perhaps he will conclude that not three but thirty different voices are around him; but these, he is on his way to the West Indies, to the old calonies of Spain and France, of Portugal and Holland, of Denmark and Regland; and so the three languages suffice alike for Chilian and Peruvian, for Mexican and Californian, been and peer without change; cast in good supply, and about the previous lower. from Italy and Spain, with all the varieties fron Britain, were bound for very varied lands; for Antigua. for Barbadoes, St. Thomas, for Hayti, Janaica, Havans, for Vera Crua and St. Kitt's in West Indies; for Demerara, La Guayra, Caraccas, Columbia and New Granada on the Main; for Peru, Chill in South Pacific; for San Salvador, Honduras, Guayaquil, Mexico, and California in the North; with four for New Zealand, and myself alone for Australia.

At St. Thomas's, four vessels, each a large ship, awaited our strival, and into these, mails, cargo, and passengers with their baggage, were transferred. In the course of the day each proceeded on its way. The Conway to Barbadoes and Demerars, the Solent to Havana, the Isla to Jamaica, and the Tamar to Colon and other places on the Pacific side of the Isthmus was about thirty passengers with their baggage, contained in 700 packages of merchandise, besides the mails. It may well be imagined, therefore, how great the bustle, boil, and excitement on board the Atrato in effecting this mighty escapier in the course of the day, and under a blasting sun. No sooner was the work effected, than we began our life on board the Tamar, which, favoured by a strong trade wind, made the run to Colon—1060 miles in four days fifteen hours, and the Captain informed me it could have been done in twenty-two hours less, had there been any object to gain, but it was useless to make speed, because the ships at Panama going north, south, and west, would not be ready to receive their passengers till the 24th. Colon, called Aspinwall by the Americans, is the port and terminus of the Panama railway on the Atlantic side.

The old town or village named after Columbus, is a few miles distant, a very unhealthy place, as is also the new settlement, which is on a swamp, recking with the luxuriance of tropical vegetation—a choice place for fever, mosquitoes and files—but we do not, or need not debark until the train is ready to bear us away, and on Friday, 22nd, we mount the cars and plunge into the wild and exquisitely beautiful scenery of the Isthmus.

The immense chain of the Cordilleras, which, under different names, extends almost without interruption through the entire length of the two Americas, traverses the Isthmus; but instead of those lotty volcanic peaks which constitute so striking a picture of this gigantic range of mountains, there is a sudden depression in its passage across the Isthmus, its continuity being nearly broken at a point directly in the line of the shortest communication between the two oceans, which is where the railway crosses, and is only thirty-five miles in breadth. The summit level of the rail is 254 feet above Pacific high-water mark, and is very near the Pacific coast, towards which it descends with a grade of one in the hundred, or 50 feet per mile.

It was originated by three American merchants, Messrs. Stephens, Aspinwall, and Chauncey, the first named gentleman being the celebrated author of "Researches in Central America." They effected a formal contract with the Government of New Granada for the exclusive principle of constructing a railway across the Isthmus, and were secured from competition by a guarantee that no other iron railroad or maritime canal should be sanctioned during the concession granted to them, which has yet ten or eleven years to run. The work involved six years of toil, the sacrifice of many thousand lives, and an expenditure of £1,500,000. The line is constructed in a most substantial manner, and is maintain Its total length is forty-seven miles, and the fare cross, without any distinction of class, is 25 dollars, ut this is included in your ticket from England to be Antipodes.

Its total length is forty-seven miles, and the fare across, without any distinction of class, is 25 dollars, but this is included in your ticket from England to the Antipodes.

For the most part the rail is carried through alluvial plains or savannahs—by the edge of morasses—along the bank of the Chagus and Obisco rivers, this dense forest of exceeding richness and beauty alike of foliage and flowers. The overwhelming fertility of the soil is indicated by a recking mass of vegetation which covers the whole face of the country, and would spe-dily choke up the railway itself, but that it is kept in check by gangs of men whose work it is to conflict with this prodigal growth. Plantains, bamboos, palms, and sugar canes, forest trees and gigantic climbing plants seem to struggle ceaselessly to get into the light, while bulbous plants and rushes crowd each inch of soil and water, orchids and lichens seize upon every bit of weod and decaying boughs, on which to fasten a new life that shall feed upon death and triumph over desolation.

Panama, although not the historic town of that name, is yet a place of great interest, as being from the earliest time the base of Spanish operations on the Pacific coast, both north and south. The old town, so celebrated in Spanish annals, as the place from which Cortes, Pizarro, and all the cavaliers went forth to their conquests, was three miles distant. To it the treasure ships from Limm, together with numerous merchant vessels, came for the transport of their freight across the Isthmus to Porto Bello; and to this point the Buccaneers all made their way in quest of the Spanish treasure to intercept the rich produce of Potosi and Bogata on the way to Cadiz. Their favourite route being a little to Porto Bello; and to this point the Buccaneers all made their way in quest of the Spanish treasure to intercept the rich produce of Potosi and Bogata on the way to Cadiz. Their favourite route being a little to Porto Bello; and to this point the Buccaneers all made their way in quest of the Sp taste of the seventeenth century. The town is very dirty, for its excellent drainage has been ruised, and were it not for its admirable site, and the abundant rains, would doubtless be the haunt of fever. In spite of human neglect it is probably one of the most healthy, as it is also the most pictureaque and imposing town along the whole West Coast.

Arrived at Panams we found the Rakaia, in which the voyage across the Pacific was to be made, waiting for us, and thus any anxiety we may have felt as to the immediate prosecution of our course was allayed, and we could pleasantly occupy the short time of our stay in the town, by exploring its ruins, and endeavouring to realise its grimly gay life, when the wealth of the new world was showered on the chivalry of Spain.

of the new world was showered on the chivalry of Spain.

The Rakeis had made a rapid though tempestuous passage from England, having left Millord Haven on the 21st of April, and arrived at Panama on June 18.

The distance run was 11,315 miles. The whole passage was made under steam and secupied forty-six days eleven hours. Her average speed was 10.37 knots per hour, being in excess of the mail contract when on her proper service. She was engaged seven days eleven hours in coaling at St. Vincent and at Rio de Janeiro, and lay at anchor three days in the Straits of Magellan, in consequence of the fury of the storm and the darkness of the night, the channel being tortuous and narrow.

storm and the darkness of the night, the channel being torthous and marrow.

She is a handsome vessel of 937 tons register, and is fully rigged as a brig. Her length is 265 feet, with a beam of 32 feet 6 inches, and she is 26 feet in depth. She was built by Messur. Randolph and Elder, engineers, of Glasgow, and is fitted with patent compound geared engines of 350 nominal horse-power, but working up to an indicated pressure of 1500. The two smaller engines are high pressured with 43-inch cylinders, these first use the steam which then passes into the low pressure engines with cylinders 79 inches, and 4 feet 3 inches in length of stroke. Their combined power is given off upon a drum, which, fitted with internal gearing, causes the propeller to revolve 2½ times for every stroke of the engines, and as the engines make on an average 26-09 revolutions per minute, the screw is driven round 66½ times in the same period. The diameter of the propeller is 15 feet, it has four blades with a pitch of 17 feet. The engines are supplied with super-heaters and surface condensers, which latter contain 4½ miles of 2 inch brass tubing, so that every known means for the economical production and consumption of the motive power is used. Two cylindicals and tubular boilers, each 13 feet in diameter, and 16 feet in length, supply the requisite steam. The engineer, who superintended the construction of these engines, and has large experience as a manager both affoat and on shore.

When the Rakais left Panama, her weight, including engines, coal, and cargo, was 3200 tons, and it must be regarded as a triumph of mechanical skill and science that the application of two and a half cwt. of coal should drive this mass through the water at the rate of a mile in six minutes, and that this should be repeated for twenty-seven or twenty-eight days in continuity until the whole breadth of the Pacific, 6540 miles, has been passed over.

The Rakaia is a very comfortable ship, with all sorts of convenience for passengers, and her ventilation is good; but it seems to me that it is a serious defect for any ocean-going steamer, intended for long passages, not to be filled by means of tanks or an inver skin like the Great Eastern, to take in water ballast, and thus to preserve the trim and gravity of the vessel. In consequence of the want of such loading, the Rakaia has tumbled about and rolled greatly during the last 2000 miles, affecting not only her company, but also her working.

We left Taboga, an island about twelve miles from Panama, where ships anchor and take in coals, because the bay near the shore is shallow, at 2 pm. on Sunday, June 24th. Our course lay south, in order to clear Cape Mata, a low point eighty miles distant, and forming the western arm of the Gulf; thence to the Galapagos, sighting and leaving them on the starboard hand. From the Galapagos, the captain, who has had long experience in command of steamships, and is evidently a master of his craft in its higher departments and scientific knowledge, took a great circle course that would carry us by Pitentin leand to a certain point on the New Zealand coast, whence he could at any time diverge to Cape.

Island to a certain point on the New Zealand coast, whence he could at any time diverge to Caps Palliser.

From the Galapagos we had the Humboldt or Equatorial current in our favour, and the trade winds blew softly. We accomplished half our distance is twelve and a-half days. During this period the weather was deliciously mild and enjoyable. We were in the tropics. The thermometer generally stood about 80°, but there was no cessation of heats; the atmosphere was so pure and invigorating that it was a luxury to inhale its freshness, and at night the vault of heaven seemed to have enlarged and the stars to have become more lustrous, owing to the absence of moisture and the diaphaneity of the atmosphere. Respecting this part of the passage I heard it said it was monoconous, but then peace itself is monotonous, and all enjoyment becomes tame after a little while; however, we were soon routed from this luxury, for the second half of the passage was stormy enough. On Sunday evening, July 8th, we passed Pitcain, but as it was dark and a heavy swell running, we durst not near the shore. The island is inhabited, but being out of the usual course of ships, communication is infrequent, and a heavy swell renders landing difficult.

On Sunday evening, July 8th, we passed Pitcain, but as it was dark and a heavy swell running, we durst not near the shore. The island is inhabited, but being out of the usual course of ships, communication is infrequent, and a heavy swell renders landing difficult.

The interest felt in Pitcairn centres on the fact that it was the home of the mutineers of the Bounty. In 1788, Captain Bligh, R.N., was sent into the South Seas to take the breadfrait plants to the West India Islands. He was a harsh and severe commander. His crew mutinied and put him with others into a boat and sent them adrift in April, 1789. They then steered for Tahiti, but reached Tubuai, where they quarrelled with the natives, and after the manner of the Sabines, carried off acven of those whom they chose. They then went to Tehiti, where, when some had landed, Christian cut the cable and put to sea. They were never heard of again, till in 1803 they were found at Pitcairn. They were living in great simplicity and content. Ehau had well used his name and exerted his influence.

The island is fertile, its climate delicious. Vegetables and fruit abound. It is two and-a-half miles long and one broad. In 1856 the community was getting too large. Norfolk Island was offered to them by the British Government, and thankfully accepted. In 1858 they were all removed—90 males and 104 females, many of them being children; but some families of them sighed after their old home, and were again removed, so that another community has again sprung up in Pitcairn, which may yet be an important refuge and place of call as a half-way house.

No sooner had we passed the island than we found we had left the tropics and pleasant weather, and fallen at once into wintry storms and cold. The sea raged—the winds were beree, and the ship, lightened of her coal, began to roll heavily. After two gales of great severity had blown themselve to the weather of the halp with greater torce and endurance dashed our hopes, and for several days the powers of the ship were heavily task bourne lies too far to the west to avail herself of it, except as an alternative, yet it is probable that experience and a medited arrangement will make it equally good for Melbourne, and secure the much coveted bi-monthly mail. Two days may well be saved at Panama, and if the speed of the ship can be a little accelerated, or time gained through a knowledge of prevailing winds and currents, Wellington may be reached on the 18th instead of 22nd, and a vessel proceeding direct from Wellington would reach Melbourne on the 24th, and again leaving Melbourne on the 5th following would reach Wellington on the 12th, the mail going thence on the 12th, and due at Panama on the 8th of the month next ensuing, and arriving at Southampton on the 28th. Sydney and Melbourne would thus receive their mails from the East on the 24th and dispatch them on the 6th; from the West, Melbourne would receive hers on the 12th, and Sydney on the 15th, while Sydney would dispatch on the 22nd and Melbourne on the 26th. As a passenger route I should think the Panama line will be greatly patronised. The passage meney is two-thirds that of the other overland service, and return tickets will be issued at a fare and a half. The Company, for its own sake, may be expected to avoid those things which have caused such discontent with the vessels; the accommodation and the attendance on the voyage between Ceylon and Australia made that passage so unpopular that it has almost ceased to be a passenger line.

The voyage of the Rakaia—an experimental trip—absolutely the first over an untried way, without any collected knowledge of winds and currents, has been made within a few hours of the computed time, and must therefore be regarded as a success most satisfactory to her captain and officers, and encouraging to the Company and the New Zealand public. I am a passenger only, without any interest whatever in the Company, but have a keen sympathy with whatever tends to bind the new world in loving fellowship to the old, or that shall promote the intercourse, Thirty tons of coal elements of the fuel are consumed. Thirty tons of coal are used every day.

On the order of the day for the second reading of the Advances to Agents intrusted with Goods Bill.
Mr. TOWNS saked the hon. member in charge of the he had not yet been able to obtain the optoion of the

was the move drairable since there were one or two Causes of the bill that were objectionable, and that it required more nature consideration.

Mr. A. CAMP BELL said he could not accede to any post-ponement, as the bill had been already before the Chamber of Commerce and received its approval. He had also been surprised at learning that the bill was to be opposed by the Government, and that being the case, the scorer the House have the grounds of this opposition the better. He could see no reason for this opposition the better. He could see no reason for this opposition because the bill was a verbatim copy of one that had been passed some four-and-twenty years ago in England, and had acted well there ever since. The object of the Act was to do away with the law that had previously existed in England that an agent to whom goods were consisted, and who might have made an dwance upon them was not allowed to recoup himself to a greater extent than the advance so made. This operated very hardly on third parties, who might have made advences. Thus an sgrut having a consignment, and making an advance of £10,000 upon it, if he took an advance from a third party fer more than the £10,000 the transaction was an invalid one, and the innocent third party suffered. The alteration of the law, however, legalised such a transaction as an invalid one, and the innocent third party suffered. On the question being put.
The POSTMASI ER-GENERAL pointed out that the motion had not been seconded.
The PRESIDENT said that, being an order of the day,

In a Franchent and that, being an order of the day, it required no seconder.

Bir. TOWN'S rose to move the adjoarnment of the debate, not with any intention of opposing the bill, but for the purpose of obtaining a clear expression of opinion in regard to it from that class of the community to which he himself belonged. To secure this, he moved the adjournment of the debate to that day week.

Mr. DEAS THOMSON said that the principles of this and other measures that were likely to be brought forward shortly would no doubt be greatly influenced by the necessing mail from England, and on that account he considered it would be better that the second reading should be persponed for a fortnight. The House ought to have some opportunity of seeing what had been the operation in England of the bills for facilitating credit, before it was called upon to give a decision on this matter.

Sir W. MANNING had no objection to the postponencet, but could not give in to the idea that the operation of this Act in England had had anything to do with the financial difficulties there. The Act had been passed through several financial crises, and could therefore have nothing to do with the pro-ent one. In fact, it was purely a commercial Act, dealing only with trade and commerce, whilst the crisis was purely a financial one, trade having never been in a more healthy state.

Mr. GORDON was sorry that the postpos ement had not been assented to in the first instance, though be entirely concurred in the remarks of the last hon. member who had apoken. In so far as he could gather the optimions of the mothers of the Chamber of Commerce, they were not opposed to this bill, and as it was per carry in the session a little delay could do no harm.

The POSTMASTER GENERRAL said that, if he motion for adjourning the debate were not agreed to the health of the first place because it was a faithful transcript of the English Act, and, being so, was in many respects altogether inapplicable to the side of the document of the described by the first plan followed his interpretation of the rule.

Sir WILLIAM MANNING said that, in his opinion according to this rule, the Order of the Day for the accound reading of the bill required a secondor. The order of the House was, that the second reading "stand an Order of the Day," not that the bill should be read a second time. Therefore he considered that the metion for the second reading did require a seconder.

The PRESIDENT referred to a precedent which had occurred when Mr. Wentworth was President of the Osuncill. In that instance a resumption of an adjourned debate was set down as an Order of the Day. The objection was then raised that the motion for the resumption of the debate required a accorder. The President then ruled that, according to parliamentary practice, the Order of the Day did not require to be seconded.

Sir WILLIAM MANNING said that the order being for the resumption of a debate, of course would not require a seconder, the House having ordered that the debate should be resumed. That was quite a different question from the case now under consideration. At any rate, the House could set the matter right, notwithstanding the decision of any previous President.

The PRESIDENT (thought the present case was quite analogous with the precedent he cited. Parliamentary practice did not acknowledge any differences in the proceedings on a debate which had been adjourned from one day to another. The present bill was not properly before the House, in consequence of the motion for the second reading not having been seconded.

Mr. PLUNKETT did not consider the case was one in ings on a debate which had been adjourned from one day to another. The present bill was not properly before the House, in consequence of the motion for the second reading not having heen seconded.

Mr. PLUNKETT did not consider the case was one in point, and contended that an order of the House, even if not seconded, must be carried out.

Sir W. MANNING hald that the decision of the late President must have been in print, as it appeared that it was an adjourned debate, implying that the mover only had addressed the House, and that it had not reached the stage of seconding, and all orders for a second reading should have a seconder as well as a mover.

Mr. DEAS THOMSON supported the ruling of the President, but in creder that doubts in which he shared should be removed, he moved that the point be referred to the Standing Orders Committee.

Motion put and agreed to.

Sir W. MANNING, to avoid difficulty, seconded the moting for the second reading of the bill, which he cansidess a good one, and the provisions of which had had no filing to do with the financial difficulties in England. It seemed just and reasonable that, if a man with money chose to assist a peor person to get into business, without being desmed a partner, as this mode of repayment might be all he would have against the possibility of the loss of all he advanced. It would be as well, however, to qualify the provision by a restriction, that if such trader paid the money back to the leader whan the borrower was in insolvent circumstances, or within sixty days of his insolvency, that should be liable to be set aside, as in an ordinary case of insolvency. The object of the bill was not so much to give an advantage to the leader whan the borrower was in insolvent circumstances, or within sixty days of his insolvency, that should be liable to be set added, as in an ordinary case of insolvency. Mr. J. E.A.S. THOMSON, although he agreed with a good 'seal of what had failen from the last speaker, he could no' coincide with all that hon, gentleman's remarks. This 'all would, no doubt, give increased facilities for trading on credit; it would enable capitalist to set up men of strew in trade, and yet hold them scatheless should those men of strew fail. The public would sever know whether men in trade were set up in this way or not. There were one or two cases in which the bill might be useful, and if it were confined to those cases in its operation he would not oppose it. At any rate, this bill tended togive facilities for trading on credit, and, therefore, without actually apposing it at ones, he would ask for further time to consider it, and hear how the bill worked at home, where it had not been long in operation.

ones, he would ask for further time to consider it, and hear how the bill worked at home, where it had not been long in operation.

Mr. PLUNKETT would also ask the hon gentleman (Mr. Campbell) to postpone the second reading of the bill. He thought the measure would tend to open a door to frund, seeing that it would give one creditor a preferential claim over all others in cases of insolvency. The bill was therefore objectionable as it stood, atthough he believed that it might be amended in such a way as to become a beneficial measure. We could not, however, look up on this as a measure by itself, since it might be supplemented by other emactments which would prevent any wells likely to arise from its defects. He thought that the question might be postponed with advantage, and that the optimon of persons interested in the subject should be taken. He would suggest that the second reading of the bill be postponed for a fortinght.

Mr. CAMPBELL said he was not unwilling to postpone the measure, but pointed out that it would be inconvenient to put it down for the same day as the other bill. If it were postponed for a week, he would be willing to postpone it again for another week, if hon, members were willing to go on with it.

The POSTMASTER-GENERAL thought that whilst the borrower and the lender were both well cared for in the bill, the interest of the dealer with the borrower was slogether overlooked. The public in general also was likely to be deceived by the bill holding harmless what were called sleeping partners; but as the bill was not to be presered on to-night, he should withhold his remarks upon this and other points connected with the question until the debate was taken.

Mr. J. CAMPBELL then formally moved the adjournment of the debate to this day fortnight.

The motion was put and carried.

On the motion of the POSTMASTER-GENERAL, the House adjourned at 6 o'clock until 4 o'clock of this day week.

EPPS'S HOMGEPATHIC COCOA.—Homeopathic Practitioners, and the medical profession generally, recommend COCOA as being the most healthful of all beverages. When the doctrine of homeopathy was first introduced into England, there were to be obtained no preparations of coces either attractive to the taste or acceptable to the stomach; the nut was either supplied in the crude state, or so unskiffully manufactured as to obtain ittle notice. J. EPPS, of London, homeopathic chemist, was induced, in the year 1839, to turn his satention to this subject, and at length succeeded, with the assistance of cialsorste machinery, in being the first to introduce an article pure in its composition, and so refined by the perfect trituration it receives in the process it passes through, as to be most acceptable to the delicate stomach.

BREAK FAST BEVERAGE.

For general use, EPPS'S COCOA is distinguished as invigorating, with a grasfelul smoothness and delicious aroma. Dr. Hassail, in his work "Pood, and its Aduleratiena," says:—"Corea contains a great variety of important nutritive principles—every ingredient necessary to the growth and sustenance of the body." Again, "As a nutritive, Cocca stands very much higher than either Coffee or Tea." Directions:—Two teaspoonfuls of the powder in a breakfast cup, filled up with boiling water or
